Introduction

- The constitution is important for a sovereign country like Malaysia.
- The Federal Constitution is the highest law of the Federation as stated in Article 4(1);
What is the Constitution?

- The constitution is a document that outlines the highest laws of the land and the principles in advancement of the rule of the country. The constitutions symbolises the existence of a parliamentary democracy that provides guarantees to the ruling body and people in the aspects of protection, status, rights, and more.
• The constitution touches on various aspects of the system of ruling, special status of the Malays, religion, language, freedom of rights and such.

• The constitutions also outlines federal, state and shares powers.

• The constitution is highest source of the country’s laws.
Types of Constitution

• Written Constitution
• Unwritten Constitution
Written Constitution

- Document or series of document.
- Codified in a single document.
- Supreme law of the country – Constitutional Supremacy (M’sia: Art 4(1) of the FC)
- Enacted constitution
- Countries with written constitutions are: the United States of America, India and Malaysia.

The Malaysian Constitution is a written constitution, which in turn based on basic principles of the British government and constitutional conventions. The Malaysian Constitution, therefore, has rightly been described as based upon the ‘Westminster’ model.
Unwritten Constitution

• Not codified in a single document - the rules and principles of the constitution are scattered in the forms of statutes, charters, political conventions and practices.
• Derived from many sources: – Historical Documents
  • Magna Carta – some rights of the King given to Barons
  • Bill of Rights 1689 – certain political & civil rights given to citizens such as freedom of speech in Parliament, freedom from cruel & unusual punishments
